THE FOURTH OF JULY.

Under the smooth, hoped for respectable, and much abused term "safe and sane" we can so emasculate the Fourth of July that the children of a couple of generations hence will not have sufficient interest in the day to inquire its significance.

Some years ago a Chicago newspaper undertook the task of compiling the accidents and fatalities of that day—tabulating them for the imagined benefit of its readers, and then had the column wired to every paper in the country that would buy it, and as a result of this, the people have become scared, for inevitably the list is long.

But there has been no compilation of the accidents and fatalities of other days of the year—that list too is long, but we never see it in concrete form; no one institution has made a business of gathering up these facts and sending them broadcast.

Some mornings when we pick up a newspaper, we see a whole front page devoted to murders and accidental deaths and serious injuries occurring on the preceding day, but we fail to charge it up to any particular cause, and yet, these may be as many and as serious as on any Fourth of July.

Where there are eight millions of lives, wide awake, enterprising, amusement-chasing people, there must be accidents and many of them. To think otherwise is absurd.

It is well to have the matter of Independence day celebration to some extent under police control, but when we eliminate the fire cracker, the anvil, the horns, the bells and the pink lemonade and the general feeling of abandon and rejoicing, and turn the day over to cemetery-like proceedings, church services and tiresome oratory, the old folks may be pleased, but the young folks, those who make the day glorious, what of them?

What if your early hours of rest are disturbed on the Fourth of July morning by a little or a lot of noise? It is only one day in the year. You love your country and you would be offended if your neighbor doubted your patriotism. Clustering around Independence day are memories it is not profitable to forget. The day when freedom is won is always a great day.

It is quite likely, in fact it is morally certain that if we abandon our present methods and our past methods of celebrating the good old Fourth, we are likely to run to another extreme much less desirable.

STOCKINGS HIGH.

So the bill passed the senate increasing the duty on stockings after all, and the poor women that protested, who filed their protests with the representatives of the different states at Washington have had all their work and worry for nothing.

Senator Penrose from Pennsylvania, that dear man who so dearly loves the people, says he would not vote in favor of the Aldrich schedule on stockings, were it not for the fact that by so doing, he helps maintain wages; that his tears and his acts in this are all for those who toll.

If we were endowed with the Roosevelt propensity to harsh language, there is only one word that would fit the Penrose case: Penrose is just a plain "liar," and he is merely playing to the galleries, trading upon the gullibility of the many when he says such things.

Penrose, like other Penroses of the senate, who vote for an increased duty on stockings, does it because he is urged to it by the stocking manufacturers of this country and not because of those who knit and spin, these to him are as nails in a wall.

When the tax on stockings was being considered in the making-up of the Wilson bill under the Cleveland administration a bitter war was waged on the proposed rate and the tendency of those in authority was to cut that rate.

In order to settle the controversy, three big stocking manufacturers of the country were summoned to Washington, two Democrats and one Republican, and after a long session, these men absolutely determined what that rate should be.

Under the McKinley bill that rate was raised, and now the Aldrichs and Paynes and Gallingers and Penroses propose to raise it again, and all in the name of the "dear people" who are making three of four hundred dollars a year while the stocking manufacturers, like the heads of the steel trust, are making millions.

The glory of the Democratic mule has been eclipsed and the Major from Bryan's farm has descended to the field of usefulness by dragging a beer wagon around Goldfield. This is hard on prohibition Nebraska, but harder on the mule, which had grown accustomed to a life of ease.—Goldfield Tribune.

But what's the use of locating the north pole if the discoverer is going to be unable to find his way back home?

Italy's leading poet predicts he will die within six weeks. What a bunch of editorial wrath he must have incurred.

Grand Rapids, Michigan, has a surplus of $700,000 in its treasury. It must also have a surplus of non-grafting politicians.

If Mrs. Howard Gould had had half a dozen kids to dress, spank, feed and put to bed, what a different song she'd sing!

How remarkable it is that while San Francisco's supervisors confess that they were bribed, apparently no one bribed them.

As the real and only original "high-flyer," Mrs. Howard Gould has the Wrights skinned several miles for genuine lofty soaring.

MISS POMEROY MAINTAINS LEAD IN GODDESS CONTEST

Miss Pomeroy maintains the lead in the goddess contest, with Miss Robb and Miss McLean following closely. Miss Robb has assumed the second place, while Miss McLean, who was in the lead for several days, has fallen to third place. The vote is becoming more spirited from day to day and there is every reason to believe that the closing days of the contest will witness heated rivalry among the friends of those who are entered in the race. The vote stands: Nellie Pomeroy 2250
Blanche Robb 2175
Frances McLean 2150

IMPROVED LEAD MARKET CONDITIONS

Lead, like copper, is not only going up in price, but its consumption is rapidly increasing. The National Lead company, which is the largest consumer of pig lead in this country, reports a record-breaking business, with the result that the surplus supply on hand is rapidly being consumed. Electrical manufacturers and the makers of lead cable are again in the market. The price for the metal promises to advance to at least 5 cents before fall.

IMLAY MILL TO OPEN NEXT MONTH

ONE OF THE BEST PLANTS TO BE FOUND IN HUMBOLDT COUNTY.

The mill at the Imlay mine near Humboldt House, Nevada, will go into commission about July 1, says the Salt Lake Herald. It has a capacity of fifty tons daily, and the General Engineering company which is erecting the plant, declares that it will be the first and most perfect mill of its size in this western country. Superintendent J. H. Turner reported that the building is practically completed, mortar bricks are in and the engine is on its foundation. Most of the shafting is set and the other machinery is being speedily placed. The Imlay mill will be lighted with electricity. It has three 60-horsepower boilers.

The mine is equipped with a fine hoist and compressor, a sufficient supply of water and, in fact, everything required to do good work. The ore bodies are opening up better and better all the time and Mr. Turner writes that from a new strike on the incline level he has obtained the finest gold panning he has ever found in that country. The 250-level is highly mineralized quartz and is now only forty feet from the big ore shoot on the upper levels. The drift south on the 150 level is in splendid quantity of shipping ore. Superintendent Turner declares that he will have no difficulty in supplying the mill with fifty tons of good ore per day for an indefinite period and that he will soon have news for the stockholders that will cause rejoicing.
